

Volume of groundwater extraction:

With the expansion of tap water facilities the volume of groundwater use was declining. However, groundwater is comparatively clean and cheap, so a large amount of groundwater was used in industries and as a result the use of groundwater became a factor causing land subsidence.

