

Land subsidence:

Serious subsidence occurs because of excessive groundwater pumping for use in households and industries. Subsurface environmental problems such as subsidence occur repeatedly in major Asian cities, though there is often time lag between stages of urban development.

