

Final Evaluation at the end of FR

Title of the Project	Vulnerability and Resilience of Social-Ecological Systems
Project Leader	UMETSU Chieko
General advice and comments of PEC This integrative project on vulnerability and resilience of social-ecological systems is clearly considered by PEC as being rather compatible with founding mission, goals and research of RIHN. Objectives were neatly set and implementation was successful with well-achieved data gathering and analysis on the effectiveness of resilience. The findings of the project might be presented in a wider range of academic fields and their relevant dissemination circles in order to have rather substantial and broader place for this project and its findings in the academic community. Most of the goals indicated in the original plan were attained though PEC would have liked to see more effective communication of the project results with local recipients.	