

Final Evaluation at the end of FR

Title of the Project	Environmental change and the Indus Civilization
Project Leader	OSADA Toshiki
General advice and comments of PEC This project is considered to be highly compatible with RIHN's founding mission and research by presenting a very clear project framework and constructive research findings on interaction between environmental change and Indus Civilization. With its cross-disciplinary research model and implementation, this project can present a good example for RIHN's goal of integrated global environmental studies. This would present further opportunity for transdisciplinary interaction by providing research findings and publications not only for academic circles but also for other interested groups working on civilization studies and climate change. Further analyses on public reaction to the project's extensive publication and releases would be an interesting reference for future RIHN research activities.	