Employer / Division	Senior Researcher / Researcher [Contracted Employee] , Fashloks Project, Research Institute for Humanity and Nature (RIHN)
Recruitment (persons)	2–3 positions
Work location	(At the time of appointment) Research Institute for Humanity and Nature (Address: 457-4 Kamigamo Motoyama, Kita-ku, Kyoto-shi, Kyoto 603-8047 Japan) (Scope for changes) None.
Job Description	(At the time of appointment)  The project "Fair and Sustainable Hunting Management through Dialogues between Local Knowledge and Science (the Fashloks Project)" (Project Leader: Associate Professor Shun Hongo; https://sites.google.com/kyoto-u.ac.jp/rihn-hunting-project ), under the Global Environmental Culture Creation Program (Matsuda Program), conducts research that contributes to the creation of an integrated environmental culture by connecting scientific knowledge with Indigenous and local knowledge. Concretely, across rural sites in tropical rainforest regions (Cameroon, Colombia, Gabon, Malaysia, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo), the project builds research through equitable dialogue and collaboration between local communities (Indigenous and local knowledge) and conservation agencies and scientists (science), with the aim of co-producing a management system for sustainable wildlife hunting.  The successful candidate will, in collaboration with the Project Leader, domestic and international project members, and stakeholders at each site, undertake the following:  1. Long-term fieldwork-based research in animal ecology, anthropology, and area studies at the project sites. Examples include:  A) Research on the distribution, abundance, ecology and behaviour of wildlife, with an emphasis on mammals.  B) Research on local livelihoods (especially hunting practices), diets, and cultural aspects related to wildlife.  C) Interdisciplinary/transdisciplinary research on the implementation of wildlife monitoring and hunting management in cooperation with local communities and conservation agencies.  2. Close coordination with the Project Leader and project members to support day-to-day project operations.  3. Planning and delivery of project-organised meetings, symposia, and outreach activities in Japan and overseas.
